Introduction

An empty journal is filled with infinite possibilities.

Writing regularly in a journal helps us to develop our imaginations, encourages us to express our thoughts, feelings, and dreams, and provides a way to communicate experiences in words and pictures. Many students feel frustrated when asked to keep a journal. They may not be sure of what to write, or they may be intimidated by a blank sheet of paper. Even professional writers occasionally face "writer's block." The Journal Jumpstarts series provides ideas and suggestions for daily journal entries. Each book contains 29 jumpstarts. You could give each student a photocopy of the same page or provide a variety of pages and allow students to choose their own topics. You may have students who will be able to sit and write without jumpstarts. At times students may prefer to express their thoughts through drawings or with a combination of drawings and writing. Be encouraging!

Through making regular entries in journals, students become more observant of themselves and the world around them. Journal writing on a regular basis strengthens students' attention spans and abilities to focus. Keeping journals promotes self-esteem because students are doing something for themselves—not for grades or in competition with others. A journal can become an essential friend, a confidante in times of personal crisis.

Encourage students to get into the journal habit by setting aside writing time every day at about the same time, such as first thing in the morning or shortly before lunch. Share their journal time by writing in your own journal. What better way to encourage a good habit than by example?

Note: Assure students that what they write is confidential. Provide a safe, secure place for students to store their journals. Respect their privacy, as you would expect your privacy to be respected—read their journals by invitation only.

My Schedule

You may have a busy schedule—a list of things that you do at the same time every day or week. Maybe you take out the trash on Tuesday nights or practice baseball on Saturday mornings. You probably go to school every weekday morning. Describe your schedule. Is there anything you'd like to change about it? Why or why not?

Date _____

Responsibilities

You may have been put in charge of certain things at home or school, like washing dishes, feeding a pet, or keeping your desk tidy. These are responsibilities. What are your responsibilities? How do you feel about them?

A cartoon illustration of a boy with dark hair, wearing overalls, pushing a large, striped trash can. The trash can has a lid with a handle. The boy is smiling and looking towards the trash can. The background is a white sheet of lined paper with horizontal lines.
